Many Americans today believe in the benefits of Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) and use it for general health maintenance. Although this method is not the sole correct method of health care in Traditional Chinese Medicine, it has been a vital component of health care systems for many people throughout history. In fact, Hippocrates, an Ancient Greek physician, considered the heart as the center of the body and used acupuncture to treat many ailments. Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) is a method of diagnosis and treatment based on the belief that the body is composed of a network of energy channels that is believed to affect an individual's health. Traditional Chinese Medicine uses acupuncture and herbs to treat health issues. This method of treatment is usually reserved for the treatment of injuries and illnesses. This technique is used to identify the original cause of an injury or illness before applying treatment to that area of the body. Some of the most common conditions that Traditional Chinese Medicine treats are: Acne Arthritis Cancer Muscle or Joint Pain Low Back Pain Headaches Anxiety, Depression and Insomnia Stress Management Laryngitis Fibromyalgia Sprains Many other conditions can also be treated with Traditional Chinese Medicine. The technique has been used for thousands of years, and is fairly simple, and inexpensive. The method of acupuncture works by inserting needles into the skin in a particular pattern. Often, needles are placed in various positions, along meridians, to remove energy blockages in the body. Herbal medicine is the practice of using herbal medications and supplements to treat illnesses. A herbal medicine is usually derived from a plant that is safe and effective. Many of these plants are native to the United States and are
